And if the management continues to provide bills of the character offered this week, yesterday's signs will be truly prophetic, whether they usually fall in dry weather or not, for it is as good enough for any "pop" time vaudeville anywhere.

Following the Hearst-Selig picture, which is the best current picture that has ever been exhibited in Richmond, the bill opens with Juggling Labeled, a single, who is both a juggler and a comedian, and who displays a number of new tricks, both in his juggling and his comedy.

Mack and Sangster, young members of the progressive sex, who are performing twelve and ten years old, respectively, then proved to be a real attraction. The older of the two is a serious sort of singer, whose notes delight the house, but the younger, sturdy little fellow, who is a real comedian, is a real attraction.

A small group of radicals of the House of Commons met during adjournment to-day and adopted a resolution that there was not sufficient reason in the present situation for Great Britain intervening in the European war.

When the House reassembled the Foreign Secretary made his statement with respect to Belgium. These members then protested that the secretary had not made out a case for war.

Philip Morrell, Liberal, said the best that could be said for the contents of the model, it is a little advanced, from which to land England in a war simply because a few German soldiers wanted to cross Belgium.

J. Kell Hardie asked what action was going to be taken to alleviate the sufferings of those who would be hard pressed by the war. He said he would do all he could to arouse the workingmen against the government's proposals.

Chancellor of the Exchequer David Lloyd George announced that the government had made arrangements for war risks for ships' cargoes, of which full details would be given later.

The Cabinet held a session during the recess, and was escorted to the House by cheering crowds.

GRAVELY CONSIDERING
Sir Edward Grey, in his second statement in the House of Commons, after the conference of ministers, in regard to the German ultimatum to Belgium, said:

"The British government is taking into grave consideration the information received, and I will make no further comment."

The entire communication made by the British Foreign Secretary to the House of Commons on his second appearance to-day was as follows:

"A message has been received from the Belgian legation here, stating that Germany sent to Belgium at 7 o'clock last evening a note, proposing to Belgium friendly neutrality, coupled with the free passage through Belgian territory of German troops, promising the maintenance of Belgian independence at the conclusion of peace and threatening, in case of refusal, to treat Belgium as an enemy. The time limit of twelve hours was fixed for the reply."

This statement was received with murmurs from all parts of the House, and then Sir Edward Grey continued: "Belgium answered that an attack on her neutrality would be a flagrant violation of the rights of nations; that to accept the German proposal would be to sacrifice her honor, and being conscious of her duty, Belgium was firmly resolved to repel aggression by all possible means."

The Belgian reply was received with loud cheers by the members, and Sir Edward concluded with the declaration that the British government had taken the information received into grave consideration, and that he would make no further comment.

The railroad men consented to present the case for settlement in a way already approved by employees and the Federal Board of Mediation to avert what the President characterized as a "national disaster," although they realized, and President Wilson pointed out, that all the merits of their side could not be taken into consideration.
